Parking:

There is no public parking lot for La Jolla Cove. On-street parking can be difficult to find, particularly in summer. It is limited to three hours at a time on weekdays and unlimited on weekends, but check the signs for any restrictions. Paid parking is available in downtown La Jolla at several locations and is a short walk from the beach.

Entrance Fee: None

Parking Fee: There is no parking at La Jolla Cove, and the best bet is to park in downtown La Jolla, where you may have to pay a parking fee and walk.

It's harder to find a parking spot on La Jolla on a weekend than it is to find gold on the beach. If you're there for the day, you've got to find someplace to park your ride, so these tips might help. There are no parking meters, but streets nearest the water do have a one hour time limit. Go a little further away for two hour parking, and be sure you observe the time limits. Parking enforcement is active here even off-season. You'll find a few paid lots scattered around town and the ones on the edge of downtown are a little cheaper. Your best bet may be a parking lot so hidden that few people notice it. Turn downhill onto Coast Blvd. from Prospect and you'll find it on the left, across from the Cave Store. Vehicles over 6'5" won't fit in this one, though.
